The Opportunism and Absence of Ideological Foundations within the PCR (Brazilian Communist Party) and the Alternative of the Comintern (SH)

For a party that wants to differentiate itself, ideologically, from the other Brazilian parties, the PCR continues badly, feeding the confusion in the proletariat and sowing doubt. A member of the already dubious INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF LENINIST MARXIST PARTIES and ORGANIZATIONS, to which the PCR adhered in 2004, it mirrors well the ideological cement of both organizations, which will always lead to capitulationism.

This time it is perfectly clear, in an article, what in practice is not found in the CIPOML page, whose theme is "On the Party of the Proletariat".

The CIPOML website reads with the greatest brazenness that the triumphant revolutions have done thanks to "the existence of a political party independent of the proletariat, a party equipped, guided by Marxism-Leninism, a party that has the capacity to build a program and draw up proposals, action lines and constellations that genuinely represent the immediate and strategic interests of the working class, which has the willingness and sagacity to face the changing conditions and develops them in the revolutionary process, of a party strictly linked to the working class and to the entire working masses, of a fiercely disciplined party, with a single direction and a single will to act, which has a central, capable and decisive direction, of a fierce and courageous party that knows how to face the class enemy in all circumstances. "

From there appear a series of references to Lenin, Stalin to many common places, which can be in any neo-visionist program and a brief passage to Albania without even mentioning the great founder and communist leader Enver Hoxha.

The PCR can do worse. In an analysis of the Chinese regime "Betrayal of the Communist Party of China (CPCh) to the working class and the 1949 Revolution," they speak of the power of the existing bourgeoisie, of capitalist restoration (contrary to one of the first sentences in which they claim that in China capitalism never existed, but there was a degeneration of Deng Xiaoping). There is talk of the Nepotism of the members of the (CPCh), but the snake is left untouched within the egg (the Maoist philosophy, which already presupposes a broad collaboration with the so-called nationalist bourgeoisie), in the same way references to the Cuban revolution and the "saint" CHE Guevara, are permanent both on the website of the newspaper "A Verdade" and on the website of the "PCR" itself.

Now, if a party, as CIPOML says, has defined strategic lines, it is disciplined, with only one direction, how can it accept both Albania (although it seems with some shame, given the brief form in which it stops there) and a party, where Maoism, Castroism and Guevarism, like the PCR, fall, or vice versa. The only explanation is opportunism, capitulationism and lack of direction/strategy, the same that currently leads the PCR to enter into an alliance with the UP party (Popular Unity for Socialism) that exists without a defined ideology, basically presenting themselves as anti-fascist socialist democrats, who ally themselves with the PSOL (trotskyist/ evangelical Christian) in the chambers and states where they can.

They want more confusion and ideological indecision, also of action, than the one presented. Without a party that truly says what they have been showing it in words, but also in acts, there is no solution for the countries of Latin America that easily allow themselves to be seduced and deceived by the Cuban reality, source of so many evils and comparisons (Maoists, Fascists, Trotskyists, Revisionists), such as the COMINTERN (SH), the COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL (STALINIST-HOXHAISTS), as they prefer to be alerted in several of their documents available on their page. Only with a solid ideology, based on decades of study and improvement, with an experienced and capable direction will it go further in Brazil in particular and in the World (including Latin America) in general.

It is high time to open a Brazilian Section of the Comintern (SH), for the good of all the people, especially the most exploited and oppressed. Even more so, Brazil being the economic power, disguised in front of its children, which is, to give them only the crumbs, something that no left-wing party wants, or has the courage, to admit.

Brazilians deserve and achieve better with the potential they possess, they lack only the strategic direction for power, not least because they already have enough survival tactics.
